

YOUR BLENDED LEARNING PROGRAM

Discover answers that will work for a group of your people as they accelerate their learning cycles through a combination of sequenced Activities and live coaching.

Your staff need to learn fundamental and new skills (as the world is changing and with it are new challenges). However, most traditional learning techniques don't work well. Worst of all they can be a waste of time for both the participants and the businesses who ultimately pay both the fee and for the participants' time.

One thing we've seemed to learn through the COVID pandemic is while many things can be achieved 'without disturbance', depth in learning comes from discussion, participation and collaboration.

Consequently we have gone a step further by combining the Action Feedback Trigger based Activities within our Quests with face to face or live online sessions.

What I got most from this was we are all following the same Activities but in different areas of operations and I benefited a lot from discussing all our responses together.

(Charlie Harris, Cabonne Shire Council. Charlie's group was doing the Frontline Leader Quest.)

If you've got a group of four people maximum ...

First we logically 'group' the Activities. We then start with an introduction to the Quest (everyone together) where expectations are set with respect to outcomes and time frame. The first group of Activities are previewed. The participants then complete them just like any other Quest. In the next session we come back together, review and discuss particulars of what's been achieved, preview the next set, and so on. Some Activities are completed during the live sessions. Our job throughout is to facilitate discussion.

Enquire further with us – please click the orange button in the same row as this pdf on our website.